

RUTgers COmmunity REpository (RUcore)

A FEDORA-based Institutional Repository To Support Multidisciplinary Collections

Handouts for the CNI Task Force Meeting
April 3 – 4, 2006

Ronald C. Jantz
Rutgers University Libraries

RUTgers COmmunity REpository Mission

Rutgers Community Repository (RUcore) is a repository of digital research and educational materials created and used by the University community and its strategic collaborators. The goal of the Rutgers Community Repository is to advance research and learning at Rutgers, to foster interdisciplinary collaboration, and to contribute to the development of new knowledge through the archiving, preservation, and presentation of digital resources. Original research products and papers of the faculty and administrators and the unique resources of the libraries will be preserved and made accessible with tools developed to facilitate and encourage their continued use.

RUTgers COmmunity REpository Materials in RUcore

RUcore provides a permanent, open-access digital archive for the information resources originating at Rutgers University and its community members including:

- Primary source materials (photographs, data sets, digital video and audio, preprints, technical reports, grant reports, etc.)
- Theses and dissertations created at Rutgers University
- Significant special collections from Rutgers University Libraries, including New Jerseyana, materials from the Institute of Jazz Studies, labor collections, and the papers of significant statesmen and politicians from New Jersey.

RUcore - How it Works

