About the Latin American Ephemera Collection

The Latin American Ephemera Collection contains thousands of digitized pamphlets, brochures, flyers, posters, placards and other printed items created since around the last quarter of the 20th century by a wide variety of social activists, non-governmental organizations, government agencies, political parties, public policy think tanks, and other types of organizations across Latin America, in order to publicize their views, positions, agendas, policies, events, and activities. The vast majority are rare, hard-to-find primary sources unavailable elsewhere.

Starting in 2015, the Library started providing open digital access to previously unprocessed parts of its Latin American Ephemera Collection through the Digital Archive of Latin American and Caribbean Ephemera. Much of the collection, however, remains accessible only in

Digital Archive of Latin American and Caribbean Ephemera

The Digital Archive of Latin American and Caribbean Ephemera is a steadily growing repository containing a previously unavailable subset of Princeton's Latin American Ephemera Collection as well as newly acquired materials being digitized and added on an ongoing basis. The bulk of the materials currently found in the Digital Archive were originally created around the turn of the 20th century and after, with some originating as recently as within the last year.

History of the Latin American Ephemera Collection

The Princeton University Library began to collect Latin American ephemera and gray literature in the 1970s. Barbara Hadley Stein, the University's first Bibliographer for Latin America, Spain and Portugal (1966-1977), initially sought to document some of the major political developments of the period, including the rise to power of military dictators, some of whom, the institution collected of the Cuban

Ephemera in Microfilm and Special Collections

Access to all of the material collected and processed before the Digital Archive became available in early 2015 was provided by slowly developing thematic sub-collections, cataloging and microfilming them, and, in many instances, creating corresponding finding aids. Approximately 350 sub-collections were processed in such manner over the years. They remain accessible only by visiting Firestone Library in person or through interlibrary loan.

Please visit the Ephemera in Microfilm and Special Collections page for an overview of that vast portion of the collection.

Brazilian ephemera just received

Posted on August 10, 2022

In recent days, we unpacked a shipment of dozens of fascinating pieces of ephemera gathered across different regions of Brazil by our colleagues at the Library of Congress Office in Rio de Janeiro.

Items address a wide variety of timely topics including indigenous rights, women's rights, anti-racism, and COVID-19 public education. Also included are several political campaign propaganda pieces for the 2022 general election.

...we could develop sustainable and potentially scalable ways in other applications to create item level metadata for posters, leaflets and other types of ephemeral materials; and what if we could broaden the scope of those who can create it?

We will develop and deploy a scalable, sustainable and replicable model that can be used for similar ephemeral collections from around the world.

We have digital images!

... now what?

We will develop a streamlined data-entry system for the creation of item-level metadata from the ephemera and a system for ingesting the metadata into a database architecture that will link to the images
